

About the Authors

Vibiana Bowman is a Reference Librarian and the Web Administrator at the Paul Robeson Library, Rutgers University in Camden, New Jersey. Her books include The Plagiarism Plague: A Resource Guide and CD-ROM Tutorial for Educators and Librarians (Neal-Schuman, 2004) and Scholarly Resources for Children and Childhood Studies: A Research Guide and Annotated Bibliography (Scarecrow Press, 2007). She has also published in various refereed journals and library and information science publications.

Cynthia C. Degnan is a graduate student in the department of English at the University of California, Davis. She studies the construction of childhood in relation to gender, sexuality and race. Her work has previously appeared in Atenea out of the Universidad de Puerto Rico.

Lynda L. Hinkle attends Rutgers University School of Law in Camden. She has an MS in Teaching from Rowan University and is completing her MA in English at Rutgers University. She has presented papers at national conferences and received a number of awards for her presentations and research.

Jimmie Manning, PhD, and Jacqueline McNally, PhD, are Assistant Professors in the Department of Communication at Northern Kentucky University. Stephanie Verst is an undergraduate student at Northern Kentucky University. Dr. Manning's research focuses upon sex, gender, and sexuality in relationships; Dr. McNally's research focuses upon communication pedagogy; and Ms. Verst is preparing to be a middle school teacher.

Courtney Novosat is a PhD student at Tufts University whose recent teaching and writing explores the role and function of female adolescent narrators in American Literature. She is particularly interested in the intersection of childhood and media studies and particularly aggravated by the marketing of sexuality to adolescents.

Debbie Olson holds an MA in English from Central Washington University and is currently a doctoral student in Screen Studies at Oklahoma State University. Her research areas are African film, children's media and culture, postcolonial theory and cultural studies. She has published numerous book reviews in a variety of journals and has contributed to such collections as Writing African American Women (Greenwood Press, 2006) and the Encyclopedia of Prostitution and Sex Work (Greenwood Press, 2006), and the forthcoming African American Biography Project.

Jennifer Witt received her M.A. in English Studies with an emphasis on children's literature from Illinois State University. She writes about adolescent literature, picture books, and feminist youth culture. She is currently a community college English professor at Northland Pioneer College. She lives in Lakeside, Arizona.

Susan Wright, Assistant Professor at Clark Atlanta University, teaches American and British literature and serves as Undergraduate Coordinator. She has published articles and a book review in CLA Journal, Western American Literature, the Mark Twain Encyclopedia, and MELUS. She also has articles forthcoming in 2007 in SLJ and in a collection, titled Damned Mob of Scribbling Women. In addition, she is co-editing, with Ernestine Pickens Glass, a collection of articles on Charles Chesnut's works.